

THIS IS A CALL TO ARMS...

This week I have been seriously troubled by the continuing assault on Christian values and culture in Australia. I see that we are close to the tipping point, becoming another Canada, another Venezuela. Sadly, my conversations with Christians suggest that the majority are choosing to remain passive and carry on their little meetings as usual, trusting that God will somehow take the threat away. My thoughts and prayers have led me to the opposite conclusion. In my view, it is time for action, and this newsletter is a call to arms and the development of an Action Group which I am calling the Australian Judaeo-Christian Alliance (One New Man – Ephesians 2:15).

DECISION TIME

The first question we must ask is: what kind of people are we? Are we:

- A rear guard, with the main body of Christians already in retreat?
- A remnant cultivating the memory of better days, setting up groups to recall an obsolete doctrine?
- A smug minority, hugging our unique self-righteousness in a mutual admiration society?
- Saying that it is enough to 'sow the good seed' when preparation of the soil is just as important as the quality of the seed?
- Do we agree that "the result matters little; the important thing is that you are gaining heaven"?
- Are we operating out of that false piety in which prayer becomes an excuse for passivity?
- Are we operating in supernaturalism, waiting for the miracle, the realisation of prophecy, when everything is settled by divine intervention?

Joan of Arc was asked: "You say that it is God's will to deliver the people from their calamities; if this is so why is it necessary to raise up men at arms". Joan replied: "The men at arms will give battle and God will give them the victory". We recall also what Pius X said of 'good people': 'through their idleness and cowardice they are the sinews of Satan's reign"

If we choose action, we must ask further questions:

1. Do we understand the battle? This is not an occasion where the two sides are drawn up in uniform on both sides of a river; this is a melee in which the enemy may be a neighbour, or a member of one's own family. The wheat and tares are growing together.
2. Do we have a doctrine of action? Do we even care if we have one? In the book shops there are two shelves. The Christian shelf contains masterly books on principles; everything is said exceedingly well BUT there is nothing on counter-revolutionary action. The shelf of the opposition contains thousands of books and pamphlets dealing with means, procedures and approaches to advance the revolution. The climate change people started their attack in 1795 and they have advanced their cause with precision to the present day with dedication and clearly defined strategies. It is the same with the forces that are now operating to crush Christian thought and practice in the world, and Australia in particular; secular humanists added 50% to their number between 2011 and 2016 while the church declined 11%. Evangelicals/Pentecostals rose 1% in the same period – hardly a spiritual revival! All that evangelistic effort for so little result!

The secular-humanist left has taken control where it matters: governments, the media, the universities and our schools and are proselytising our children thousands at a time. At the same time the church is sectarian, uncertain, passive and stricken with syncretism – most Christians believe that Godless evolution is true, and homosexuality and gender politics is totally accepted in some quarters.

In the midst of the crisis, there is one book that can guide the actions of those of us who want to stand and hold the land for the One who owns it. Jean Ousset was a serious thinker, a prolific writer and a member of the Vichy Government during the War; he wrote his book “Action” just after the Second World War to direct the Church in actions against the combined forces of Masonry and Communism. OK, he was a Catholic and his book is addressed to Catholics, but Protestants will find him completely relevant. They also need to open their minds and understand that Catholics can definitely be members of the Judaeo-Christian Alliance – they were not only the first Christian Denomination, but they are still the biggest (one billion)! And their writings are head and shoulders above the rest of Christendom.

YOU NEED TO GET THIS BOOK from IHS Press, Norfolk, Virginia, USA – see their webpage and order form. Cost is around $A30.

To encourage you, next month I will send you the Ousset’s Foreword. It concludes with a story.

“When the last Moorish King of Granada was leaving to go into exile, he paused for a moment to look back at his beloved palace and wept at what he had lost. His mother said to him: ‘You do well to cry like a woman over what you did not have the will and the tenacity to defend like a man’”. (Is that a gender discriminatory statement?!).

YOUR RESPONSE TO THIS NEWSLETTER

I have no wish to send newsletters to people who are not interested. If you want to join me in action against the forces that are bent on destroying Christianity and pushing us into the sea, then open the attachment, sign it (if you agree with it) and return it to me by email scanned.

Rest assured, if I do not hear from you, I will no longer bother you with all this talk of action!

Looking forward to hearing from you
